Concordia 2000

This Concordia Yearbook, the first of the 21st century, records the varied activities and accomplishments experience that is a university education. It is, of course, much more than the formal work of learning in interaction with other students and with Concordia's professors and staff members. Most important of all, it and for self-realization.

In the years to come, you will often look back to your Concordia experience and, regardless of where life's long record of the 1999-2000 academic year will help you recapture them.

As you join the family of over 100,000 Concordia alumnae and alumni, I wish you full success and satisfaction in of Concordia students during the past year. These are indeed noteworthy and they attest to the richly rewarding classrooms, studios, and laboratories and passing examinations. It is also the social, cultural and athletic is an opportunity for personal growth, for increased self-awareness currents have taken you, this will assume an ever more important place in your store of memories. This excel-all your future endeavours.

Dear Member of the Class of 2000:

You are now a graduate of Concordia University, and to be proud of your success. Congratulations on this accomplishment!

ries of your time at the University, there is a This yearbook - your yearbook - is designed to help you remember what made Concordia so spe- of your graduation year, and of those who shared it with pages five, ten, twenty years from now, and you will encounter a very lane, a glimpse of the person

Concordia graduates are found in every corner of the world. You now join their ranks as an active alumnus or alumna. We hope that you will each carry with you the values and aspirations us and your fellow classmates fondly in very best for a happy and successful career in your chosen

The History of Loyola: 1899 - 1974

The Society of Jesus was founded in 1537 by Ignatius of Loyola and six companions. Dissatisfied with the school system in the 16th Century, they established their own standardized form of education. Jesuits have since become known primarily as educators and missionaries. In 1599 a blueprint for Jesuit education was formalized in a document called the Ratio Studiorum or "Plan of Study".

The first Jesuit school in Quebec was the "College of Our Lady of the Angels," an elementary school for boys opened in 1635. Students were taught in the three main languages of that time: Huron, Montagnais and French. Like all Jesuit colleges at the time, the College used the Ratio Studiorum as a basis for its curriculum and methodology.

The College closed after the English conquest of Quebec in 1760. There was worldwide suppression of the Society of Jesus in the late 1700s, and the Jesuits were not to return to Canada for over 80 years.

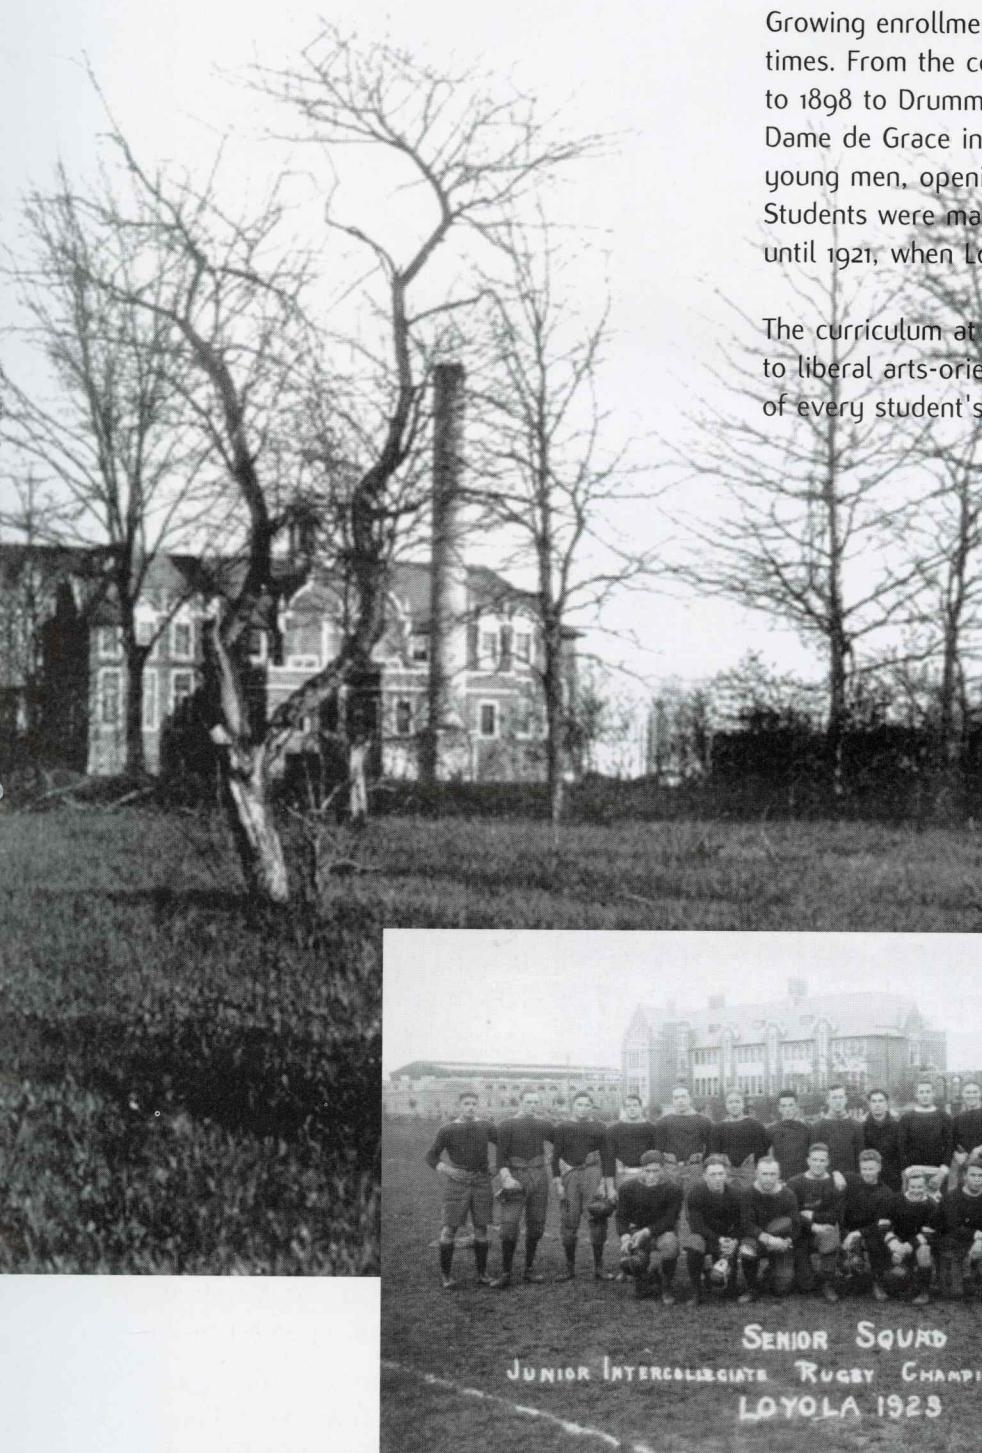

In 1842, the Bishop of Montreal, Ignace Bourget, invited the Jesuits to open a college in Montreal. They founded Collège Sainte-Marie in 1848. Loyola College grew out of the English programme of Collège Sainte-Marie, and was established as a separate entity in 1896. On March 10, 1899, Loyola College was incorporated by an act of the Quebec Legislature.

Loyola College could not grant degrees under its own name because it did not have a university charter.

Gaduates of Collège Sainte-Marie and of Loyola College received their Bachelor's degrees from Université Laval and, from 1920 onward, from the newly-established Université de Montréal. The Jesuit colleges, however, maintained autonomy over curriculum, methodology and graduation requirements. The quest for a charter became a long sought-after, mission that continued to elude Loyola.

Growing enrollment at the college forced Loyola to move several times. From the corner of Bleury and Ste. Catherine streets, it moved to 1898 to Drummond street, before settling once and for all in Notre Dame de Grace in 1916. The college offered preparatory studies for young men, opening its doors to women students only in 1959. Students were made up of high school and undergraduate students until 1921, when Loyola High School became a separate entity.

The curriculum at Loyola College grew from being classically-based to liberal arts-oriented, but theology and philosophy remained part of every student's degree until 1971-72.

The History of Sir George Williams University: 1926 - 1974

The history of Sir George Williams University began with the establishment of the Young Men's Christian Association in Montreal in 1851. Part of the Y.M.C.A.'s mandate was to meet the needs of its members and to serve the Montreal community, so when members of the community, working individuals and local business leaders voiced the need for education "obtained from no text book...(but) from original sources," the Montreal Y.M.C.A. stepped in, and in 1873, the association inaugurated evening courses in vocational and general education. This system was known as the Educational Program and later, the Montreal Y.M.C.A. Schools.

In 1926, the Montreal Y.M.C.A. Schools changed its name to Sir George Williams College in honor of the founder of the Y.M.C.A. (London, England, 1844).

The College was intended to expand formal education opportunities for both young men and women employed in Montreal. Student guidance counselling and student-faculty interaction were particularly encouraged within the tightly-knit college community. The Depression and the economic boom in the '30s both led to steady enrolment increases. The College grew from a two-year program in the 1920s to a four-year program in 1934.

In 1948, Sir George Williams College officially obtained its university charter although it had been granting degrees since 1936/37. The recognition and financial assistance that came out of this led to further expansion. In 1959, the College requested that the Provincial Legislature amend its University Charter, changing its name to Sir George Williams University.

The university operated in various "annexes" throughout the neighbourhood but rapid expansion of the University led to the construction of a new building to accommodate all of its activities. In 1956, Sir George Williams University moved into the newly-constructed Norris Building. Even as the new building was opened, it was evident it would not be large enough and increasingly heavy enrollment forced the university into more annexes. Planning began for the construction of a new and larger building, and in 1966, the Henry F. Hall Building was opened on de Maisonneuve Boulevard.

Meanwhile, structural changes separated the combined Faculty of Arts, Science, and Commerce into three distinct faculties. Increased enrollment and larger government grants allowed the College to hire more full-time faculty members. Many disciplines began to offer more specializations, and Masters and Doctoral programs were added to the growing list of Majors and Honours.

It was the first Canadian university that offered a full range of university programs to evening students. In the late-1960s, Sir George Williams University severed ties, financial and otherwise, with the Y.M.C.A.

At the time of the merger with Loyola College, Sir George Williams University offered undergraduate and graduate programs to a diverse community.

Concordia From Then to Now

Graeme Decarie

The merger of Loyola and Sir George that created Concordia University happened in 1975 and, oh, there was anguish in the land. Tears were shed at each college over the destruction of fine, old traditions. Fiery speeches were made calling down the wrath of the gods. Even years after the merger was a done deal, some faculty still muttered darkly about the sins of the other side, and avoided the shuttle bus as though it were Charon's ferry to hell.

It was just a few years before the merger, 1972, when I signed on as a faculty member at Loyola College. Loyola. The name had long brought to my Protestant mind images of shadowy halls with scurrying forms of black-frocked Jesuits planning who knows what dark deeds. (Though for all I knew about its evil, I had, of course, never actually been inside the place.) I was pleasantly surprised when it turned out to be not so bad at all. The Jesuits, the few still left, turned out to be not only dedicated teachers thoroughly committed to their students, but a pretty amiable bunch. In fact, that first year at Loyola reminded me powerfully of my student days across town at a place called Sir George Williams of the YMCA.

Sir George in the 1950s. Sir George. The place you went to if you couldn't get into McGill. Sir George, where the tiny cafeteria reeked of running shoes from the Y's neighbouring locker room. Sir George, where classes were held in YMCA residence rooms, and where the whole library collection could have been stacked in a bedroom (which, in fact, it was.) But to say Loyola reminded me of the old Sir George is a high compliment because the old Sir George was gnashing of teeth about lost traditions. I knew that the reality, the happy reality, was that the two schools had everything in common.

Twenty-five years on, and the doubters have been proven right in one respect. We're no longer the tight, little communities we were. Administrators, who one moved and chatted among us on a daily basis, who once knew most of the students as well as they knew most of the faculty, now move in heavens so remote we can only dream of them. With Concordia's enrollment of 23,000 students, it could scarcely be otherwise.

But size has brought advantages, too. One of the first moves of the new Concordia was to create a system of colleges and centres, enormously improving our ability to serve particular interests or particular groups. Liberal Arts College, for example, offers a richer programme than is normally possible in a small university. The Centre for Mature Students re-creates a sense of community for a group increasingly important to the university.

Size has also brought advantages for Concordia's profile in Canada and abroad. Size has made possible more facilities and more scholars and scientists for research. It has made possible departments that rank with the best. Just how much that means was brought home to me on a visit to a university in China. "Ah," said one of the teachers, "you're in the history department at Concordia. You must know professor X. His work is well known in our schools." And what that means is that students no longer come here because they can't get into another school. They come here because this is the first choice.

If that were the whole story, it really wouldn't be all that much to cheer about. If that were the whole story, Concordia would be just another big university with the usual advantages and failings of a big university. They all have famous researchers. They all have at least some outstanding departments. But that isn't the whole story at Concordia.

Loyola and Sir George were both founded to serve their communities. Most universities never had that focus to begin with. Those that did usually lost it as they grew and joined the race for the bubble prestige. But Concordia never did lose it.

It shows, in a formal way, with Concordia's pioneering efforts to serve handicapped students and with its ombuds office that brings human consideration to the machinery of a large institution. But it's not just in these formal ways that Concordia serves its students. It's also through a faculty and, most especially, through an office staff that have never forgotten who they serve. Of all universities I have seen, Concordia is still the leader in serving its students and its community. Twenty-five years later, the old traditions of Loyola and Sir George are alive and well at Concordia.

one of the best educational institutions I have known.

For all the anguish and fears of lost traditions at the time of the merger of Sir George and Loyola, the reality is that those two schools were made for each other. Sir George had been founded in defiance of all those things most universities lust after. It had no snobbery, no scrambling for reputation, no posing on the academic stage. It existed for only one reason, to serve its students. That, for example, is why it pioneered the terribly, terrible working class idea of evening courses and part time studies. That's why I remember its principal, Henry Hall, as one of the few university administrators ever to deserve the title of educator.

Perhaps that is why I felt so much at home at Loyola in 1972. It, too, had been founded to serve its community rather than to blow its own, academic horn. I arrived just as its Rector, Father S.G. Malone, was completing sweeping changes that updated its curriculum and faculty without ever forgetting that the school's main concern was its students.

So, when the merger came in 1975, I didn't join the general wailing and

Jacqueline Asselin

A person doesn't get the opportunity to say "I'm ready" very often, and mean it! Sure we use the expression on a regular basis, when people expect it from us, when we feel we should be ready and need to reassure ourselves (right before taking a mid-term), and even when we're lying through our teeth but need someone, anyone, to believe it. What else can you say when a life-altering moment swings your way... "nope, sorry...just can't handle the stress today"? I don't think so. "I'm ready", is what you say and most of the time you mean it more than you realize.

Graduating is just another one of those opportunities to grin uncomfortably, if not confidently, at the world and declare your readiness to progress to the next step that awaits you...desperately hoping it isn't unemployment. It is yet another chance to prove to yourself that being "completely ready" isn't a prerequisite to success, that you can receive a degree, be competent and still feel a little shaky about the future...and have that be O.K.. Afterall, as I mentioned a little earlier, you're often more ready than you give yourself credit for.

Think of it. By the time G-Day rolls around, most of us have been in school for a minimum of 17 years! The notion sounds a little insane if you're willing to believe God created the universe in seven days, that human life develops over nine months, and that it takes two and a half days to get to the moon! If we need more time, or more of anything, then I say it's time to give up.

I know many of us have thought about prolonging things a bit, thinking perhaps a certificate in ceramics would be nice or a minor in origami. But no, there comes a time when all good things must come to an end, including this safe little bubble we call education. And so we take a leap.

After seventeen years of scholastic routine, we all know how to follow guidelines, how to express ourselves, how to think analytically, how to spell "analytically" and the list of competencies goes on. We've also already developed most of the working person's traits: coffee addiction, road rage, and the "I didn't get enough sleep because my bloody computer crashed" look. Trust me, rested, we are not, ready we are!

Besides, the working world needs us. Anyone who's handled a pop quiz can handle a surprise meeting, anyone who's given an oral presentation can give a speech, anyone who's cheated on a test can work for the government (hee, hee) and anyone who's paid tuition fees can certainly pay taxes. So while some may consider graduating a life change, all it is, really, is a transition from doing what you're told, uh, to doing what you're told. More importantly however, it is a transition from paying for your knowledge to charging for your knowledge - something we can all live with, I'm sure.

With this in mind, we should all stand proudly as we wear our tasseled hats on graduation day and as we face our future job interviews. We should own who we are and celebrate how far we have come. We should try really hard to smile and say, "I'm ready"...come on now, in a believable tone.

And if any of you out there still question your confidence or your readiness, well take comfort in knowing that I'm seriously ready enough for all of us! Happy grad.

Let Millennium Bug Bite

Josh Freed

Welcome to apocalypse later.

After two years of being warned that the world is coming to an end, doomsday has suddenly been canceled, like a rained-out baseball game. Everyone, from millennium-bug experts who got rich on the bug to Armageddon addicts counting down the final days, is retracting his predictions and saying the world will still be here tomorrow.

After two years of Y2K overkill, it looks like it's going to be just another millennium - and far less trying than the last one, Y1K. Back then, millions of people had to live without heating, toilets and even running water, because they hadn't been invented yet.

I, for one, am disappointed. After all the hoopla, I can't believe we're just going to spend another dull Dec. 31, watching TV and singing Auld Lang Syne. Is that all there is? It's enough to make a guy hope that the millennium bug does strike.

I say: "Why not 2K?" Here are several reasons to hope the millennium bug bites and we all wake up in the dark:

THE Y2K DIET: Survivalists keep warning us that we won't be able to buy food, but I see this as a plus. Let's face it: after the last few weeks of holiday partying, most of us could afford to go without food for a long time.

I could live off my Christmas-party calories for three weeks. In a pinch, I could survive off the leftovers in my son's Halloween bag for a few days.

Besides, if you do get hungry, the average North American home has enough chips, Coke and other junk in the pantry to feed a Third World family for two years. So why not see the millennium bug as a once-in-2,000-years chance to empty out the cupboard?

In a continent where half the population is overweight, we could easily lose 300 million pounds from Canada's Gross National Weight (GNW). That's about 10 pounds a person. And the States could lose 4,500 million pounds.

Y2K SURVIVAL SKILLS: Ever since the ice storm, Montreal has been a city of survivalists with little chance to use their expertise. Since that storm, many families I know are fully equipped to survive Armageddon. They've bought generators, camp stoves, hand pumps, kerosene lamps, emergency gardening tools, bottled water and 30 varieties of dried-bean soup mixture. One friend assures me he is capable of making his daily half-caf-decaf-no-fat latte on his Coleman stove until 2003.

People like this are all stocked up for Y2K with no place to go. Many would secretly love a blackout to test out all their new equipment - and they deserve one.

As for me, I'm totally unprepared, but eager for action anyway. Ever since I was out of town for the ice storm, I've felt guilty about missing it, and the bug would give me a chance to suffer.

A Y2K HOLIDAY: Face it - at the dawn of the 21st century, we could all use a short sabbatical. Everyone seems to be whining about long work days, job pressure and a lack of time to do simple things.

A worldwide power blackout would force us all to take a vacation, a mandatory timeout. We wouldn't suffer from job stress any more, because we wouldn't have jobs. We wouldn't waste time on our computers, cell phones, TVs or CDs, because they wouldn't work.

Just think of the time you'd save by NOT having 99 channels to choose from any more. Think of the stress you'd avoid by not seeing the annoying flash of the 12:00 on your VCR.

A technological timeout would give us all a chance to chill out, literally, because we wouldn't have any heat either. Best of all, a Y2K blackout would mean no more Y2K media coverage, because there'd be no more media.

At last, the end of end-of-the-millennium news.

Y2K Opportunities: Like many people, I've been banking on the big blackout. For instance, I deliberately ran up a big Visa bill this month, figuring it would vanish at the stroke of midnight.

To make sure my bank account didn't vanish, I spent that, too.

But I do have a brilliant Y2K investment strategy to make my fortune in the next go back to 1900 as feared, see it as an opportunity, not a catastrophe. After all, you know what to do, because you've been there before. Just stay calm and take the century again. For instance, buy lots of stocks and make sure you sell them before 1929.

Y2K BREAK: If the power goes out, we'll all have to walk instead of drive and burn candles instead of electricity. But a few weeks of no gas, no cars, no electricity and no pollution would be great for old Mother Earth. She's looking very worn out these days and needs some time off to store up some fossil fuel and cool out.

Y2K PEACE: The bug would interrupt much violence that needs interrupting. For example, it would mean a time out in the war in Chechnya, where Russia's high-tech missiles would stop working and smart-laser bombs would become dumb.

Sure, they could keep fighting with more primitive weapons, but if you want to fight wars, you should have to fight them in the Stone Age. That's where they belong.

The bug might also help the hostages in Afghanistan. The terrorists would lose all radio communications with Indian negotiators so there'd be no one for them to blackmail any more. As airport power went out, they'd find themselves sitting in a cold, dark plane, with no one listening to their demands. Eventually, they'd give up and slink off into the dark.

On the lighter side, there'd be no more of those New Year's Day football games that fill TV and divide families. There'd be no Rose Bowl, no Orange Bowl and - if the blackout lasted long enough - no Super Bowl. Think of all the happy football-widows.

without instruction or supervision. In spite of repeated efforts, the operators would not take safety precautions for mining clients.

The 16-metres-long pyrolysis plant, built around a carbon dioxide heat exchanger, was developed to accommodate the mining at the Hell Building mine in the Kumba iron ore fields, located in South Africa. When the plant was first installed, it had a pyrolysis temperature of about 800°C, corresponding to a maximum temperature of 1000°C. After a few months, however, the operators, having given notice to Inland Resources, had to close the plant.

The operators had been instructed to proceed with no pyrolysis without a carbon dioxide heat exchanger, and hence were unable to use the pyrolysis plant without causing any damage to the plant. In addition, the operators had to pay a fee for each ton of material processed, which was equivalent to the cost of the plant.

After a few months, the operators were unable to pay the fee, and hence had to close the plant. The plant was then sold to a company that had been given the right to use the plant for a period of 10 years. The company had to pay a fee for each ton of material processed, and hence had to close the plant.

Hundreds of Concordia students boycotted their classes and marched through the streets, clashing with police on at least two occasions.

Their protest covered a broad spectrum of grievances: government cuts to education, administrative fees, student debt, Marriott food services, and the encroachment of corporations through campus advertising, financial donations, and representation on the Board of Governors.

The protest was sparked by the strong endorsement of a referendum sponsored by the Concordia Student Union (CSU). The turnout for the vote was a good one by Concordia standards -- 2,284 participants, about 10 per cent of the total number of students.

Most students continued to attend classes as usual, but a memo circulated by Provost Jack Lightstone well before the walkout instructed professors not to schedule important tests on the days of the strike, nor to take sanctions against students for missing class.

The first clash with police happened on November 3. After a general assembly attended by about 450 students in the Henry F. Hall Building auditorium, the students, joined by others, marched to McGill, where they were turned away. A crowd broke through a police line at Ste. Catherine St., and two police officers were slightly injured.

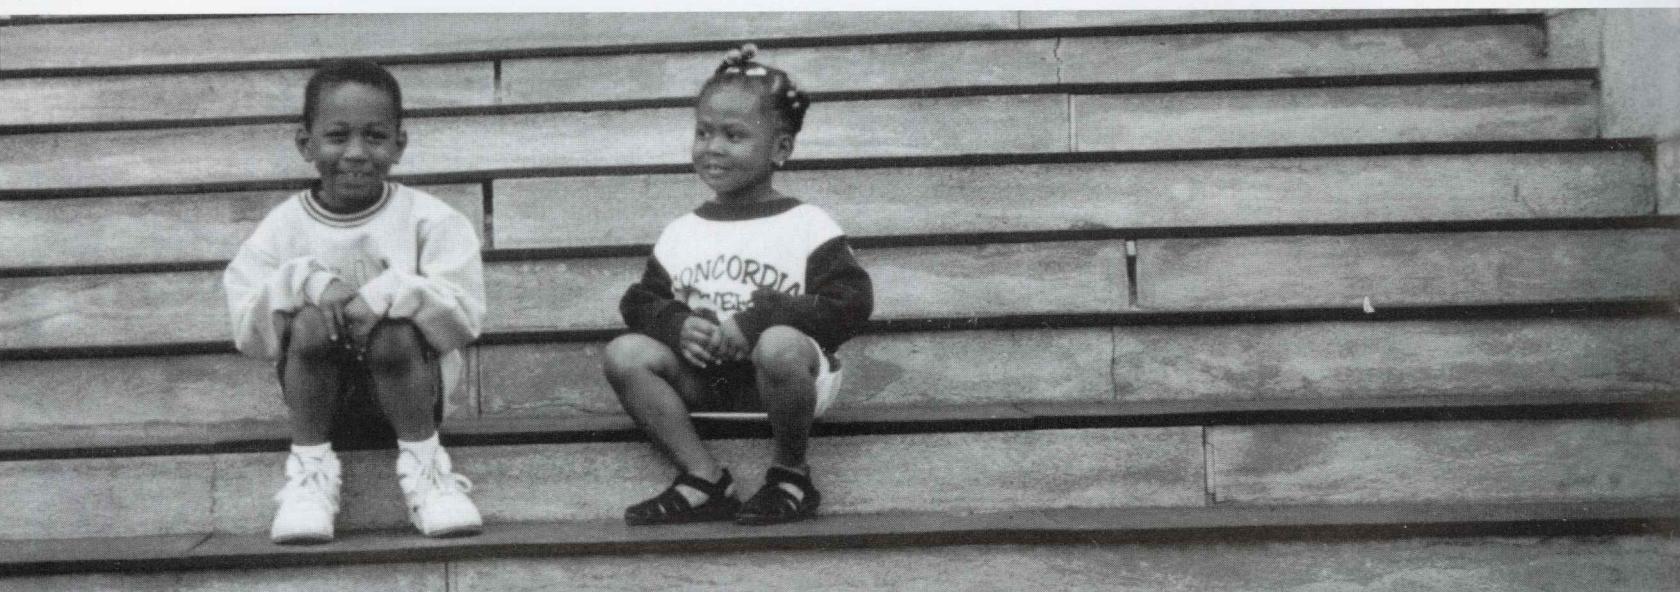

The following day, two CSU protesters, Tom Keefer and Rick Stom, were arrested for refusing to stop using a megaphone.

Also on November 4, protesters prevented the 46 employees of Bishop Court from entering their offices. The building, which houses most of the senior administration, was closed for the day.

The University embarked on the Black Community Initiative in the fall of 1997, as part of a two-year project on multiculturalism and issues of equity. Through the initiative, Concordia sought to initiate and coordinate undergraduate and graduate efforts to recruit, retain and graduate students from the black community in Montreal. The Black Community Initiative was an opportunity for Concordia to work with its black faculty and staff, its black student associations and with black community organizations, to identify and eradicate the biases, practices and conventions which operate against the recruitment, retention and graduation of black students. It would do this while contributing to a foundation of support and leadership that will increase the participation of students from the black community in higher education.

Now, it's time to get dressed up.

As now everyone's best side to the Conference is to have a great time. And that's what we did.

So, here's to you, dear "Sandy", meet Sandy to us and "Linda", meet Linda to us. And to you, the responsible teachers, keep up the good work.

I would like to thank all the teachers and students and all the staff for their hard work and dedication to the Conference. It was a great experience and I hope that we can all learn from this.

Now, it's time to get dressed up.

Concordia Council for Student Life Awards

by Jason Tchir

"I know a long speech is exactly what you want on a Friday afternoon," joked Rector Frederick Lowy. A strong supporter of extracurricular activities, he said his own best memories of his undergraduate studies only occasionally had to do with what was taught in the classroom.

The Merit Awards are presented to "the unsung heroes who contribute to student life or student services," to quote Dean of Students Donald Boisvert. History students presented Merit Awards to department secretary Donna Whittaker, for her unfailing helpfulness, and Professor Rosemarie Schade, who over 12 years at Concordia has encouraged students to pursue further studies and supported the History Students Association. "The Association really gives life to the department," said Schade, beaming. "It's the students who have really encouraged all of us to do our very best."

Marie-Judith Jean-Louis, a Building Engineering student, was given a Merit Award for her work for the Engineering and Computer Sciences Association. Presenter Jamie Baxter, ECSA's VP academic, marvelled at how Jean-Louis, now ECSA's VP finance, managed to get top grades as a full-time student while working at two jobs and doing work for the ECA.

Julie Fowler and Tricia Johns, both in the last stages of Bachelor's degrees in Art History, earned Merit Awards for turning the neglected student reading room in the Visual Arts Building into a meeting-place for students. "Fine arts is, literally, out on an edge from the rest of the campus," Johns said. "It was difficult to find a community here. Our attendance has more than doubled since we started working on the room."

"I was surprised to get an award, because all my projects have been collaborative," said Frederick Fischer, who earned a Merit Award for his work with the Concordia Student Union. He was president of the Communications Guild and worked on projects using the Internet to distribute original non-commercial content.

Marvin Cooper, Assistant Facilities Manager, won a Merit Award for his hard work keeping Concordia's sports facilities in shape. "I'd be more comfortable up here if I was fixing this mike," he joked, to laughs from the crowd.

Extra-curricular activities outside of student government were recognized by the CCSL Award for Outstanding Contribution. This award went to Graduate Students Association president Colin Dennis, who unfortunately wasn't able to attend.

Another winner was Lydia Erwig-Straughan, a graduate student and departmental secretary in Theology ("I'd like to thank the head of our department, God"), for strengthening the Theological Students Association.

Ali Mohammed, former president of the Concordia International Student's Association (CISA), was recognized for helping to welcome new students with warmth and a sense of humour." Both qualities were in evidence as Mohammed accepted his award. "I share this award with all of the CISA executives," he said, "but it's going on my wall." Mohammed, who spent some of his childhood with relatives in the U.S., dedicated the award to his family, back in Iran.

Christopher Piché, president of the Engineering and Computer Science Students Association, said, "I haven't been involved because I wanted recognition. I did it because it's fun."

Members of the Concordia Food Collective won an Outstanding Contribution Award. Presenting the award to the founders and operators of the People's Potato soup kitchen, CSU VP internal Peter Taylor read an "Ode to a Potato," the last of which went, "Potato, potato, you're made for lovin'/We really could use a new convection oven." "Actually, it's a six-burner gas range we need," said Zev Tiefenbach, as he accepted the award with fellow students Janice Tiefenbach, Marguerite Bromley, Jen Raso, and Mike Barkey. His enthusiasm got cheers from the crowd. At the end of the evening, Michael Di Grappa, the new Vice Rector of Student Services, promised that the collective would get their new stove by September.

Stingers basketball player Carole-Anne Tull, who is graduating with a BA in Sociology this month, said she was speechless over winning an award for her hard work on the court, but managed a few gracious words. Professor Stefan Anastasiu, who has taught film animation at Concordia for nearly 13 years, was given the award for excellence in teaching. BFA student Emilie Goulet, who presented the award to Anastasiu with Tanya Arbec, marveled at how devoted Anastasiu is to his students. "He helps all of us," she said, "and I've never even had a class with him."

An Award for Teaching Excellence went to Caroline Boivin, who has taught Economics for the past three years. Boivin thanked her students and colleagues, and said she'll miss them after she leaves Concordia next month to pursue other projects.

Jennifer Ellson, Jane Shulman and Richard Sinclair won Media Awards for their work with campus media. Ellson, a fourth-year Journalism student and arts editor of the Concordian, thanked her mother, aunts and friends of the family "for opening their kitchen doors to me after late nights of studying." She also credited Journalism professor Linda Kay for always being there to offer her support.

Shulman and Sinclair work on The Link. "The real way to learn about journalism is to actually do it," said Schulman, who has worked on the Link for four years and has been an editor for the last two. Sinclair, The Link's former editor-in-chief and now its advertising director, stressed that the paper is a collective. "It has never just been one person who runs it."

In December 1999, Concordia University Magazine randomly approached a group of Concordia students in the Hall, McLennan and Visual Arts buildings.

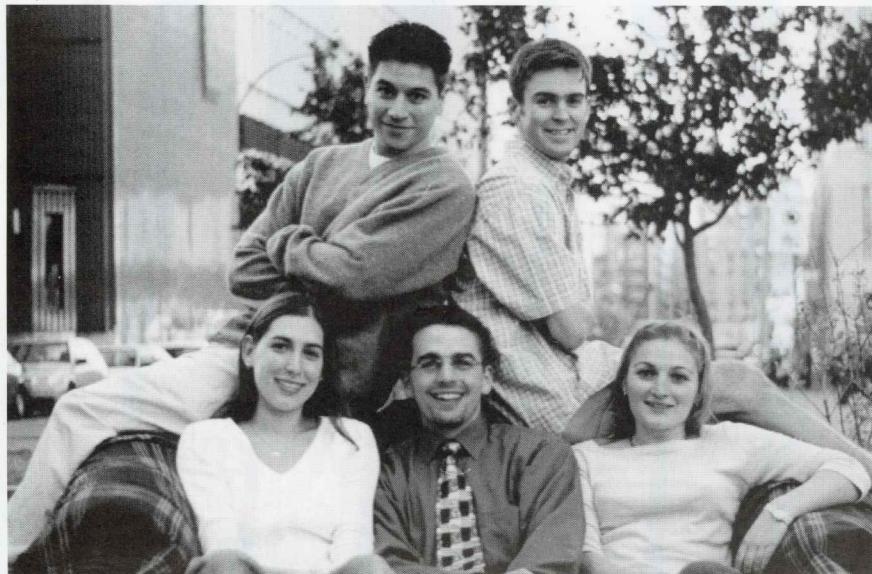

We hit on a very diverse lot, studying in different fields. We asked why they came to Concordia, what's it been like so far and what they expect to do when they finish here. As it's Concordia's 25th anniversary, we also asked where they thought they would be 25 years from now, a tough question for young people whose main concern, often, is just trying to pass tomorrow's exam. Their answers were mostly - and, perhaps, surprisingly - optimistic.

Winner of last year's "Association fo the Year Award" and "Association Spirit Award", the goal of the Concordia Marketing Students' Association (CMSA) is to give Commerce students the most enriching university experience possible. CMSA is always trying to get students involved and having the time of their life! The various events scheduled throughout the year, such as our Golf Tounament, Business Cocktail and Sports Marketing Seminar, give students the opportunity to mingle with their peers and professors as well as network with future business contacts. CMSA would like to extend their congratulations to all the graduates and thank everyone for making this year such a memorable one.

Dear friends, brothers and sisters, I feel indebted to you for having bestowed upon me the privilege and honour to preside over the Concordia Mauritian Students Association. May I seize the opportunity to convey to you and to the other ethnic association and our Canadian born friends and other well-wishers my sincere seasonal greetings. With our various activities such as our independence day celebration and other cultural activities we share as a vision the role of our association. Let's wish our association a never-ending life which has a very special role in our lives, as a meeting place where we share our life experiences, our joys and sorrows. Wherever you are friends, I wish you all a brilliant success in your academic pursuits and future career.

Covilen S. Narsinghen

Concordia Canadian Unity Club

President/Founder Donald Potter. Our club of over 250 Members promotes Canadian unity through dialogue, respect for the rights of all Canadians. We encourage participation in social activities, debates, parades (Canada Day and St. Patrick's Day), and challenge through peaceful and legal means anyone opposed to minority rights, the rights of English or French or other Ethnic Communities.

Concordia Games Club

So, if the picture doesn't scare you off I'll tell you a little more about who we are. We are the Concordia Games Club and we play games. Card games, board games and especially role playing games.

Exercise Science Student Association

Exercise Science is considered to be a vital force at Loyola Campus, and Concordia University as a whole. The students have been involved in several projects over recent years such as organizing blood drives, setting up a float for the St. Patrick's Day Parade, operating the biggest student-run learning laboratory at Concordia, participating in the 25th anniversary open house, and reviving the Hive, a campus pub that had been shut down for several years. Our major productions this year include the Pajama Jammy Jam in February of 2000, and the Summer In November Hive Beach Party back in November of 1999, our highest grossing party in both attendance and profits. This year, our highlight will be the Kinesiology Games at McMaster University in March of 2000. Exercise Science will attempt to claim the spirit award at the games for 3 consecutive years in only 3 years of participation. Our motto for this year should sum it all up, "Feel the Buzz Baby!!!"

Vinegar Tom

Vinegar Tom, by British playwright Caryl Churchill, was the Theatre Department's opening show of the 1999/2000 season. It was directed by Lise Ann Johnson, and performed with the audience seated in the round on the stage of the D.B. Clarke Theatre. The play examined the persecution of women living on the fringes of society and documented the events which lead up to the hanging death of a handful of women in seventeenth century England. Short scenes were interspersed with contemporary songs. The songs commented on the action of the play and detailed the witch-hunt and the superstitions and discrimination of the time. The simplicity of the set paired with the puritan costumes and minimal props made for an intimate and powerful evening of theatre.

A Midsummer Night's Dream

In the fall semester of 1999, Concordia Theatre Department produced A Midsummer Night's Dream by William Shakespeare. We were fortunate to have Stratford veteran Douglas Campbell direct this Shakespearean classic. The director decided to take an eclectic approach to the piece and update the fairies, who were dressed as punk creatures. This added a darkness to the script as the fairies created a real sense of the underbelly and chaos created by Oberon. The set was simple but powerful. Large erect pillars represented the palace, while fallen pillars and a canopy of netting and branches represented the forest. Lighting was a strong element, as were the eclectic, unconventional costumes. The audience was seated both on the stage, and in the auditorium, to create a sense of intimacy.

Perfect Relationships

Perfect Relationships, a musical revue with the script written by Concordia Theatre student Dan Goldberg and directed by faculty member Nancy Helms, was produced in the second semester. A variety of timeless songs were used, but Sondheim melodies predominated. The plot centered around a group of friends and acquaintances who had gathered together to celebrate the marriage of their close friends. Set at a beach side retreat, the gathering revived old passions, rivalries and romances. It became apparent that the bride and groom had their own misgivings about the union but were finally able to make the commitment. The set was beautifully realized and along with lighting, elegant costumes and timeless songs the audience enjoyed an entertaining evening.

Les Belles Sours

The final production of the year was the Quebec classic Les Belles Sours by Michel Tremblay. This was an English version of the Quebec classic and was directed by Montreal director Élise Ménard. The striking yet simple set featured a large mirror hung over the kitchen table and placed centre stage to reflect the action on the table. To one side was a totem pole consisting of kitchen appliances, and downstage right a metal staircase, which gave the set a unique Montreal look. A cast of sixteen women performed, each with their own well-defined character and dressed in colorful costumes and accessories. The well-paced play emphasized the humour of Tremblay's work and leaned heavily on stylized acting, dance and music as accompaniments for the choral scene.

Q: What is jazz?

A: Jazz is instant composition. Jazz musicians are the greatest mathematicians.

Q: What is your greatest achievement?

A: Keeping trios and quartets in the foreground of music after the big band era.

Q: What is your opinion of Montreal as a jazz city?

A: It was a great city when I was young and starting out, with places like the Alberta Lounge and musicians like Steep Wade. Then the nightclubs began to feature "shake dancers" and strippers. It lost something.

On the harshness of critics: "Any artist from any city needs to know that the community is behind them. Young artists need to be encouraged, not raked over. Don't bruise a young talent. Give the plant a chance to grow and yield its first flowers."

Homecoming

There were two weddings going on at the Buffet Roma in St. Leonard during Homecoming. The one downstairs was a real one, with a bride in white and all the trimmings, but upstairs, it was something completely different.

Honeymoon? What Honeymoon? Ignatius and Georgina's Comedy Wedding was cooked up by Alumni Affairs to make the annual Homecoming banquet something special in this 25th anniversary year. Their brilliant idea was a mock wedding between the personifications of Loyola College and Sir George Williams University.

Kirk Johnson, a student doing his MA in Creative Writing, wrote the play. He envisioned an ambitious Romeo-and-Juliet story of courtly love and domestic intrigue, with sumptuous costumes and Shakespearian cadences.

The "Merger Players," as they styled themselves, rose magnificently to the occasion. Volunteers from the ranks of Concordia staff were supplemented by several experienced actors, and they were ably directed by Heather Markgraf, Concordia Theatre Facilities Director and head of a theatre company in Hudson.

"Oyez, oyez!" shouted the town crier (Ron Spurles), directing the 200 guests into a room with a raised dais. A sprightly jester (Danielle Skene) set the scene for the action. The dashing Count Loyola (Board of Governors member Alex Carpinii) had been driven by circumstance to seek a profitable union between his son (student Abe Drennan) and the daughter of the despised Williams clan.

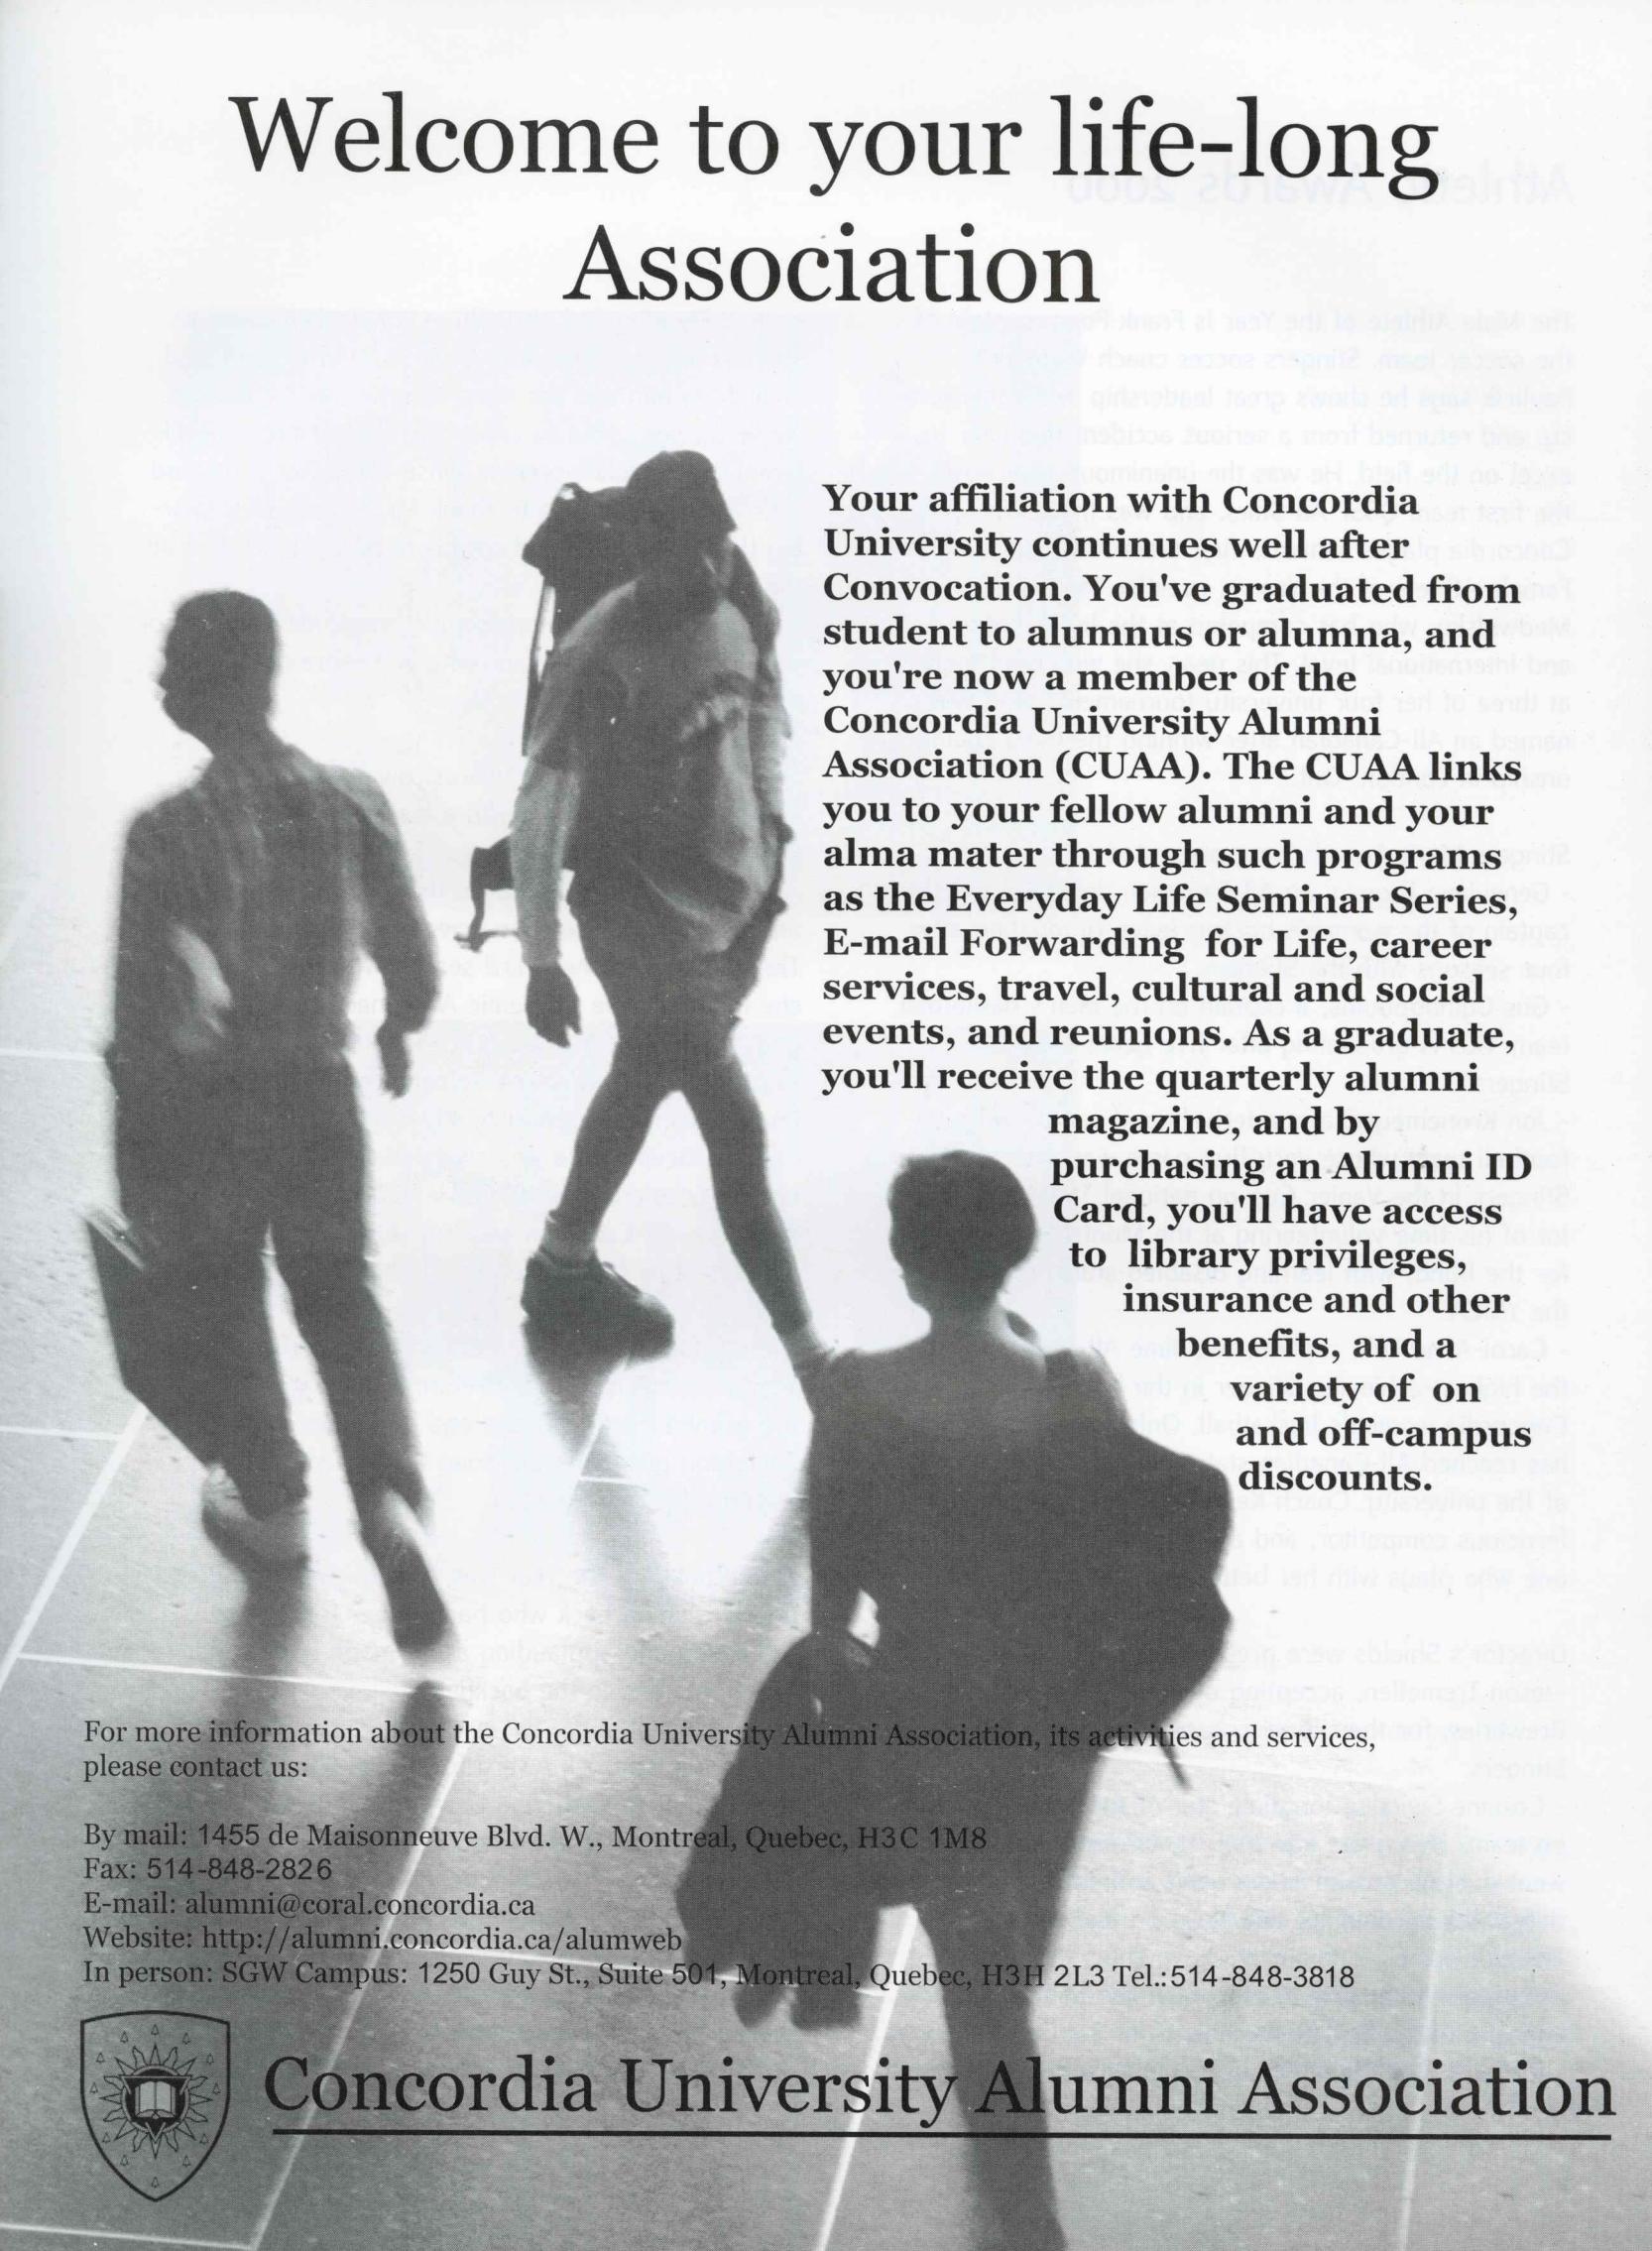

Father Fitzsimmon (Corey Castle) was hard to convince because he already had a lot to contend with. Young women in short skirts seemed to be everywhere, and the Loyola family had always been wary of the Williamses. Enter King Williams (alumnus Albert Redman) and Queen Williams (Marketing Communications Director Sandra Spina), with their sobbing daughter (alumna Mona Rutenberg) in tow. Naturally, the young couple hit it off immediately, and the wedding, with its familiar words of hope and promise, was genuinely touching.

The actors stayed in character in the banquet hall, and an epiphany of sorts was reached when the bride's brother (Carl Kouri) started to leave in a fit of pique.

Up leapt earnest proselytizers Howard Bokser, Charles Emond, Claude Jacob and Garry Milton, who admonished him, "Young man, there's no need to feel down. Young man, pick yourself off the ground!" Instantly, the guests were up on their feet, doing a wild, arm-waving version of that party classic, YMCA.

Athletic Awards 2000

The Male Athlete of the Year is Frank Pons, captain of the soccer team. Stingers soccer coach Vladimir Pavlicik says he shows great leadership and consistency, and returned from a serious accident this year to excel on the field. He was the unanimous choice for the first team QSSF All-Stars, and was the only Concordia player named a first team All-Canadian. Female Athlete of the Year is wrestler Tamara Medwidsky, who has competed at the local, national and international level. This year, she won gold medals at three of her four university tournaments, and was named an All-Canadian after winning the CIAU championship in London, Ont..

Stingers Merit Awards were presented to:

- Geneviève Fagnan, an All-Canadian defender and the captain of the women's hockey team, graduating after four seasons with the Stingers.
- Gus Gymnopoulos, a captain on the men's basketball team. Gus is graduating after five years with the Stingers.
- Jon Kronemeyer, a quarterback and captain with the football team whose very first game was with the Stingers in the Vanier Cup on national TV. He gives a lot of his time volunteering at the Montreal Association for the Blind, with learning disabled students and at the YMCA.
- Carol-Anne Tull, captain, two-time All-Canadian and the highest-achieving Stinger in the history of Concordia women's basketball. Only one other player has reached All-Canadian status in the 25-year history of the university. Coach Keith Pruden says, "She's a ferocious competitor, and a leader who makes everyone who plays with her better."

Director's Shields were presented to:

- Jason Tremellen, accepting on behalf of Molson Breweries, for their loyal corporate support of the Stingers.
- Corinne Swirsky, longtime star of the women's hockey team. Five years ago a quiet, unassuming rookie went out and scored seven goals to help the Stingers defeat the Toronto Varsity Blues 7-1 and win the Theresa Humes tournament. Now, she's the most accomplished athlete to ever wear the Stinger uniform and one of the best in the history of the CIAU.
- Richard Charette, for being an unusually supportive parent. He attended virtually every hockey game to support his son Alexandre Charette. His citation said, "Watching him and the deep love he has for his son, we've all been able to experience the games at a different level, with a greater sense of joy, of pride and satisfaction. We'd like to thank Mr. Charette for sharing this gift with us and for his fatherly support of all the Stingers."

- Linda Bailey, the department's long-time coordinator of administrative services, who will retire next month after 26 years at Concordia.

The Rector's Academic Awards, given for athletic achievement combined with a cumulative GPA of 3.4 or higher over the past two years, were presented to:

- Sabrina Silla, a forward on the women's soccer team, and a student in Exercise Science majoring in Athletic Therapy. Now in her third season with the Stingers, she is a two-time Academic All-Canadian. Her career goal is to become a physiotherapist or a doctor.
- Vince Labossier, veteran defenceman on the men's hockey team, who consistently maintains a 3.8 GPA in Exercise Science. He was awarded the prestigious Guy Lafleur Scholarship in 1998. He is a three-time Academic All-Canadian and this is the third time in four years he has earned this award.

Awards for Fittest Male and Female Athletes of the Year went to Lisa-Marie Breton, a third-year centre on the women's hockey team and a member of the Sociology program, and Loan Duong, a cornerback with the football team.

Male Rookie of the Year was Jean-Michel Paquette, a young running back who had Stinger football fans screaming and applauding as he made spectacular runs on returns and in the backfield.

The Laurie Brodrick Award for outstanding female rookie went to Catherine De Abreu, a forward with the women's soccer and hockey teams.

The Ron Lapointe Award, given for loyalty and commitment to excellence, went to Alex Charette, captain of the men's hockey team. Studying in his second language, he has achieved Academic All-Canadian status three times in three years. He has given countless hours of his time to minor hockey and is a hero to hundreds of young hockey players near his hometown of Mascouche.

The Denise Beaudet Award, named for a player with the women's hockey team who died in a car accident in 1985, went to Jessika Audet, goaltender for the hockey team for five seasons. She is a superb athlete with a gift for working with people, notably members of a program for the re-integration of people with cognitive disabilities.

1998-99 Academic Awards went to Jean-Louis Adler, Alex Charette, Amy Coelho, Monika Conway, Josée Deloretto, Dominique Des-roches, Swanne Gordon, Patrick Groleau, Gus Gymnopoulos, Chantal Hurtubise, Francois Lapalme, Andrew McClory, Laura Murray, Gino Nini, Malika Oberoi, Frank Pons, Georgia Woods and David Zaffino.

The cross-country and track and field teams continued to make strides in 1999-2000. Two athletes represented Concordia on the cross-country circuit last fall. At the provincial championship, Jennifer Casimir finished 14th out of 26 participants, and Paul Braganza finished in 28th place out of 36.

In the winter the track and field team began its season. There were several personal bests and triumphs, including the exploits of rookie high jumper Peter Alexandre. At the Sherbrooke Open on Jan. 15, he set the tone immediately by finishing in first place with a jump of 2.05 metres and qualifying for the CIAU nationals. He won again at the McGill Open and at the provincial championship. He wrapped up the season by earning a bronze medal at the national championships in March. Other highlights were the strong results of Ron Fung in the triple jump and the progress of the men's relay teams.

The Concordia football team made history when it came charging out of the gate with a 6-0 win-loss record and earned the No. 1 ranking in Canada. It was the first time in Concordia's 25-year history that the Stingers held the top ranking in Canada. Along the way, Concordia won both the Shrine Bowl and the Shaughnessy Cup with a 45-0 victory over McGill at Homecoming. Unfortunately, the team lost its last two regular season games and then was upset in the semifinal by 42-16 by the Laval Rouge et Or.

The play of the Concordia women's rugby team was a source of great pride. The Stingers finished the season in second place in the Quebec league with a 4-0-1 win-loss-tie record. The only tie was a 10-10 standoff with the McGill Martlets. In the semifinal, Concordia defeated the Ottawa Gee-Gees 32-10. In the QSSF championship, the Stingers suffered a heart-breaking 23-18 loss to the Martlets. The strong showing in the regular season was enough to earn Concordia a berth in the CIAU women's rugby championship in Guelph, Ont., where the team lost three games, finishing sixth in the nation.

Three members of the women's team were named to the 1999 QSSF all-star team. On the women's side, scrum half Sommer Christie, flanker Candace Patterson and fullback Chantal Hurtubise made the honor roll. Hurtubise was also an All-Canadian.

The plucky men's rugby team emerged with the only championship for the Stingers last fall. Despite losing its first three games, Concordia was determined to make the season a memorable one. With a single-mindedness rarely seen, the Stingers won two of their last three games and made the playoffs.

In the semifinals, Concordia defeated the McGill Redmen 17-12 and went on to meet the undefeated Bishop's Gaiters in the Quebec university championship game. Jon Webb, a second-year fullback, connected on four penalty kicks on a cold, windy day in Lennoxville, Que., to help the Stingers defeat the Gaiters 17-8 and win the QSSF championship.

Individual honors went to veteran back Mathieu Garston, second-year flyhalf Jonn Webb, fourth-year centre Harry Georgopoulos and rookie flanker Ben Page all named to the QSSF all-star team.

The Concordia women's soccer team was much improved in 1999. The Stingers finished with a 6-6 win-loss record and made the playoffs for the first time in a few years. In the league semifinal, they put up a great battle before finally losing 3-1 to the McGill Martlets, who were ranked No. 2 in the nation. Laura Lalonde, a rookie, brought some much-needed scoring punch to the team and was rewarded with a spot on the conference's second all-star squad.

The men's soccer team enjoyed a fair amount of success in 1999. The Stingers finished with a 4-2-2 win-loss-tie record and were consistently ranked in the CIAU top 10. Despite defeating the UQAM Citadins twice in regular season play, the Stingers were upset 1-0 in the semifinal by the Citadins.

Five members of the Stingers were all-stars. Defender Frank Pons was a first team all-star and an All-Canadian, while goalkeeper Valdis Tomsons, mid-fielders Ari Angelopoulos and Xavier Rena, and forward Ammar Bedawieh were named to the second team.

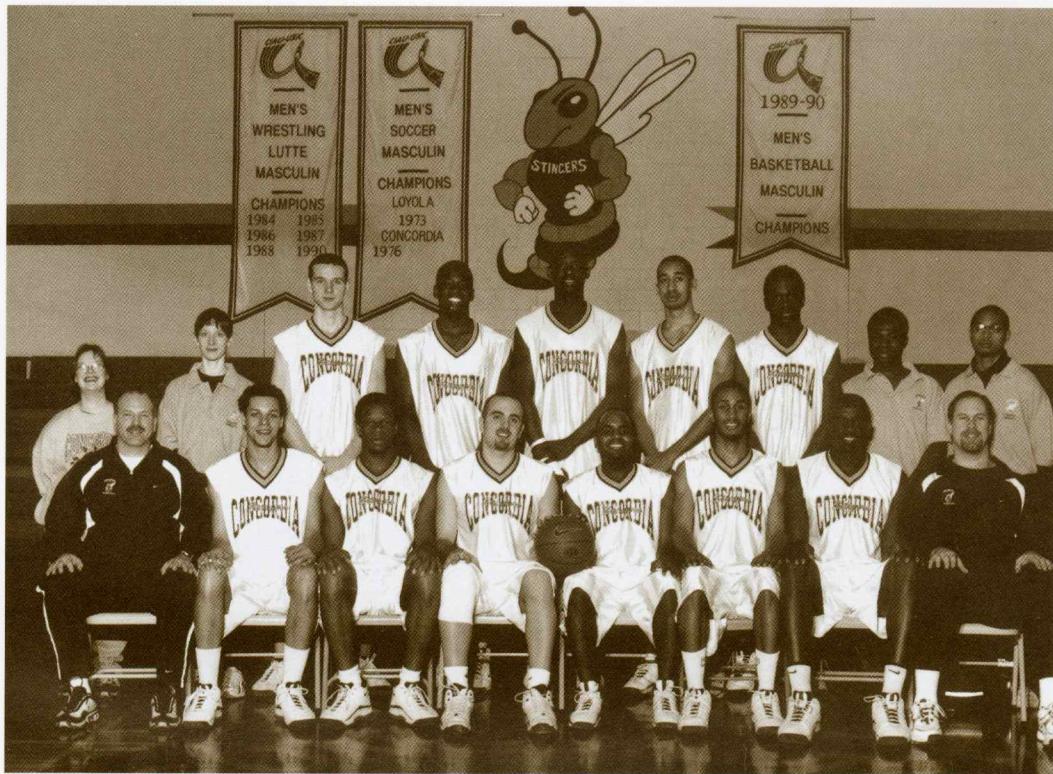

The Concordia women's basketball team had a stellar regular season, posting a 13-7 win-loss record in conference play and finishing second in Quebec. The Stingers had a 19-15 record overall, including two tournament titles. The team won both the Carleton and McGill competitions in the fall. The team was rolling along nicely, finishing the regular season ranked in the CIAU Top 10, when the Stingers were derailed by the Bishop's Gaiters in the Quebec semifinals. With a shot at the buzzer, the Gaiters won 70-69.

There were many honors for team members. Fourth-year guard Carol-Anne Tull was a QSSF first team all-star, the conference MVP and the outstanding defensive player in Quebec. She was also named a second team All-Canadian. It was the second straight national honor for Tull, making her the highest achieving Stinger in the history of Concordia. Three teammates were Quebec all-stars. Cauline Penney, Jessica Manchester and Marie-Pier Veilleux were named to the QSSF second all-star team. Finally, Keith Pruden was named Coach of the Year in the conference.

The Concordia Stingers men's basketball team defeated the McGill Redmen 76-56 to win the QSSF championship before a capacity crowd of 600 at Concordia Gym in Montreal. The win capped off a solid season that saw the Stingers return to the CIAU Final Eight Basketball Championship after a three-year absence. Youth and enthusiasm wasn't enough to get the team in the winner's circle in Halifax, where the Stingers lost both their games. But it was clear there was a lot of young talent and that the Stingers would be a force on the national scene in the next couple of years.

Aside from the emotional three-game championship series with McGill and the trip to Halifax, season highlights include winning the Concordia-Nike tournament with a 73-68 victory over the Guelph Gryphons and taking the Victoria Millenium Tournament with a 75-72 win over the hosts.

Concordia posted an impressive 20-13 win-loss record overall and finished in first place in the QSSF with a 13-7 record, including two big victories over the top-ranked Ryerson Rams.

Individual accomplishments include having guard Eric Zulu, an honorable mention All-Canadian, win the CIAU scoring title with 23.5 points a game and centre Real Kitieu's triple doubles, a feat he managed twice this season. Other Stingers to watch include QSSF second team all-star guards Mark Spence and Mike Kieran and the QSSF defensive player of the year Wayne Alexander, also a guard.

The Concordia women's hockey team dominated the university ranks once again this season. The Stingers blazed through the season, defeating the best Canadian and American teams with ease. They finished the 1999-2000 campaign with a 29-4-3 record and were ranked No. 1 in the CIAU the entire season. The team posted a perfect 12-0 record in Quebec league play and won its fifth straight QSSF championship.

The Stingers played host to the third annual national championship, finishing third in the nation with a 6-0 victory over the Toronto Varsity Blues in a game played on national TV. Their hopes for a gold medal were dashed by a controversial officiating call in the preliminary round.

There were many individual honors for the team. Corinne Swirsky, who was the top scorer in the country, was named the Outstanding Women's Hockey Player in the CIAU for the third straight time. She was also an All-Canadian and the QSSF MVP. Swirsky, along with teammate Geneviève Fagnan, were named to the all-star team at the national championship. Quebec all-stars were Fagnan, Annie Boucher, Lisa-Marie Breton and Lisa Herritt. Finally Les Lawton was named CIAU Coach of the Year.

The Concordia men's hockey team had a mediocre start but turned things around in the second half when Kevin Figsby took over as head coach. Under his supervision the Stingers posted a 10-4-1 record in the second half, giving them a 14-9-3 record in OUA competition and 18-13-3 overall. One of the season highlights was a 2-1 victory over the Trois-Rivières Patriotes, who were undefeated after 24 games. The tough part of the season was losing two hard-fought games with the McGill Redmen which eliminated the Stingers in the first round of the playoffs.

There were several honors for the Stingers. Defenceman Karl Castonguay and goaltender Marc-André Blondeau were named to the OUA second all-star team. In addition, Castonguay, Alexandre Charette, Mathieu Fleury, Eric Jenkins and Vince Labossière were named to the OUA Far East All-Star Team, which defeated the Canadian men's hockey team 5-3 in an exhibition game played on Jan. 12.

Health for all Ages

Many people, young and old, may not know that BioChem Pharma discovered 3TC®, the world's most prescribed medicine for the treatment of HIV/AIDS, and Zeffix™, the world's only antiviral for the treatment of hepatitis B.

And they may not yet be aware that BioChem is also firmly committed to the fight against other diseases such as influenza, meningitis, hepatitis C, leukemia and other forms of cancer.

But more and more, they will benefit from BioChem's innovative science as it devotes major resources to research and development in the field of vaccines and medicines bringing products to market that will improve the quality of life of all Canadians.

We are a world leader and Canada's number one biopharmaceutical company—working towards health for all ages.
